Organisation

P O S I T I O N

Organisation precedes complexity.

Where coherence exists, organisation naturally follows.

BDTH therefore regards organisation as one of the principal expressions of coherent systems.

ORGANISATION

OBSERVATION

Nature repeatedly exhibits organisation.

Cells.

Leaves.

Honeycomb.

Rivers.

Forests.

Planetary systems.

Human physiology.

Organisation appears neither accidental nor exceptional.

It is repeatedly recognised wherever coherence expresses itself.

ORGANISATION

ECONOMY

Organisation frequently demonstrates remarkable economy.

Nothing essential appears absent.

Nothing unnecessary appears sustained.

Strength emerges through relationship rather than excess.

The observer repeatedly recognises this quality before consciously analysing it.

HUMAN ARCHITECTURE

The human system likewise organises itself.

The question therefore concerns not whether organisation exists.

It concerns the principles according to which that organisation progressively develops.

Coherence and interference each organise.

They organise differently.

ORGANISATION

RECOGNITION

Organisation frequently becomes visible only after complexity has been reduced.

As unnecessary occupation diminishes, underlying structure progressively reveals itself.

The observer often experiences this as simplicity.

It is more accurately understood as organisation becoming visible.

WORKING POSITION

BDTH proceeds from the working position that coherent organisation represents one of the ordinary signatures of coherence itself.

Its repeated appearance across different domains deserves constitutional attention.

ORGANISATION

CLOSING POSITION

Organisation should not be imposed.

Where coherence progressively becomes available,
organisation frequently emerges of its own accord.
